Uncreated, Eternal, Infinite
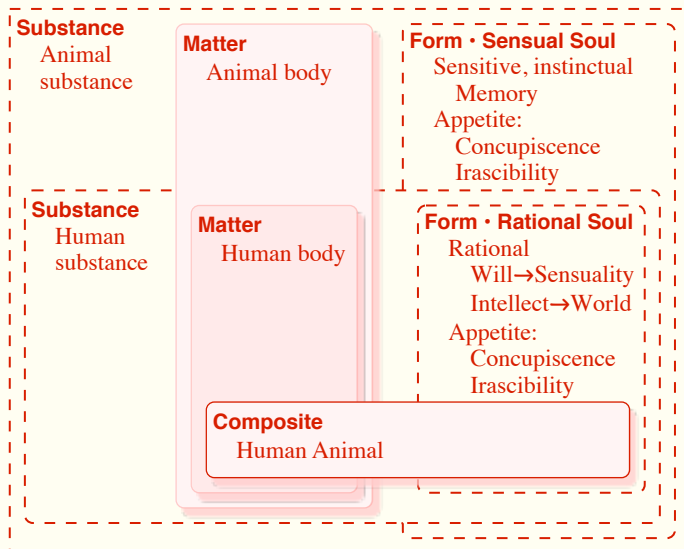

Created

Mortal, Finite

Created Matter
- Composite, of Matter (sensible) and Form (insensible but known)
- Ceaseless accidental change
- Substantial change possible

Time & Space
- Has Beginning & End
- Successive Now
- Duration of Time

Immortal, Finite

Created Spirit
- Form only, no Matter
- Substantial permanence
- Accidental change

Æviternity
- Has Beginning, No End
- Successive Now
- Duration of accidental change

Infinite Being
- Single pure Form
- Utterly changeless

Eternity
- No Beginning, No End
- Eternal Now
- Duration of that which does not change

Substance
Animal
substance

Matter
Animal body

Form · Sensual Soul
Sensitive, instinctual
Memory
Appetite:
Concupiscence
Irascibility

Substance
Human
substance

Matter
Human body

Form · Rational Soul
Rational
Will→Sensuality
Intellect→World
Appetite:
Concupiscence
Irascibility

Composite Human Animal

Form · Immortal Soul
Fallen Angels
Permitted, active

Created Spirit & Matter · Human in Animal Existence
- Human soul (third level) is rational; immortal; and subsistent
- Immortal but immortality denied
- Supernatural life is unknown
- Will (Love) directed toward senses
- Intellect (Knowledge) directed toward the world
- The material world, only, is known
- Attachment to material world
- Perfect for the Modernist heresies:
  - Immanence
  - Human = Animal + Intellect

Form · Sensual Soul

Form · Rational Soul

Hierarchy
- Sensual soul governs the rational
- Intellect placed above the Will
- Actions are rational, justified
- The Will is weak, unused
- The Fallen Angels assist

Form · Intellect

Form · Will

Aristotle

Asirvadem
Across
Four Layers

St Anselm
St Augustine
St Thomas

Sheed

Formal Logic
- Language, Semantic (Aristotle; St Thomas)
  - Demonstrated herein, without formal introduction
- Abstract concepts
  - The Infinite cannot be defined, let alone by a finite mind
  - The Infinite, God, cannot be drawn in a circle, or on a page
  - At best, this is knowledge by analogy, per St Thomas, constrained by Formal Logic